

Rebellion Against Sales Tax Flares

A PROTEST (An Editorial)

Paris, the city which for many years has been favorably known because of its vast trade area—a territory in which has been the admitted dominant trade center, is now a suburb of Dallas. To establish this startling fact one has only take the word of the Dallas Morning News. Working on a project by sending personal letters and suave representatives to Paris, the big Dallas paper has at last accomplished its task. Some resistance was found here in Paris when the movement was first started, but the work was persistently kept up until the name of Paris is now being heralded throughout the nation as one of the towns in the Dallas "suburban area."

Yes sir, Paris, 115 miles from the big Texas city, is actually a suburb of Dallas, if we are to let the Dallas News show our trade area maps for us. And the Dallas News is telling the world about the new "suburb" that has been annexed. The Audit Bureau of Circulations, nation-wide organization and generally accepted authority on circulation and trade areas among national advertisers, has finally agreed to tell a world that Paris is in Dallas "suburban area." This was one notwithstanding the fact that several other members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations (The Paris Morning News is not a member) vigorously protested when the ridiculous proposal was first made. But now the big advertising agencies and manufacturing concerns of the United States have on file the data showing Paris as a suburb of Dallas. Paris wholesalers and retailers can no longer "rate" in their own name, but will be known henceforth as small units "Dallas suburban area." Advertisers of nationally used products can cover the "Dallas suburban area," including Paris, by using the Dallas News, if we are to believe the new trade-area map to be correct.

The Dallas Chamber of Commerce and other Dallas organizations should at once call a mass meeting to pass a vote of thanks to the Dallas Morning News for this marvelous feat. It is going to mean so much to Dallas in the future. It will cement so many friendships to our neighboring metropolis. Many of our people "out here in the suburbs" may get jobs or establish business houses in Dallas, living in Paris only in the "suburban atmosphere." It is only a little over three hours drive down there, if you step on the accelerator strong enough. It is so handy to jump in the car and drive 115 miles from the suburbs "down town" for a bunch of carrots or a cool of thread, or on the bus, it takes only four hours and a minutes and the round trip is only $6.50. And think of the economy, to say nothing of the convenience of this little unit from "suburbs" to "down-town." Marvelous, isn't it?

The fact that The Dallas News circulation is weak in Paris and in Lamar county, as compared to other North Texas cities of similar size, means nothing. The Dallas News is in "Dallas suburban area," so there you are.

Yes, Paris, one of the few cities in the Northern half of the state, with department stores and other retail establishments that can really compete with Dallas stores, has been added by one of the great newspapers of the southwest as a Dallas suburb. Just what does "suburban area" mean, as used by The Audit Bureau of Circulations? Here it is:

"Suburban is intended to include the retail shopping district covered by suburban trains and trolleys, department store deliveries, commuters' points, etc."

Does Paris qualify? Well, it is so ridiculous that no answer need be given. Maybe it was thought that we would never hear of the move and that it could be used "outside" to national advertising in The Dallas News to cover Paris.

But Paris is not the only town. Other towns in our county are included. Sherman and Denison are now in Dallas "suburban area" according to this new set-up. All towns found are in it, but Paris takes the prize because it is the most distant city included in this region. Sherman is 65 miles, Denison about 74, Greenville 40 miles, McKinney 32 miles and so on, but Paris is 115 miles from downtown streets of Dallas. Marvelous "suburban area."

The Paris Morning News has no desire to create a bad feeling toward Dallas nor toward the Dallas Morning News. We recognize Dallas as a great Texas city and The Dallas News as one of the South's leading dailies, but we do not propose to sit back and let the Dallas News or any other newspaper tell the world that Paris is a suburb of Dallas without vigorously protesting.

It would not be so serious if the claim was made by the Dallas News and used here in Texas where people know the absurdity of any such claim, but the bad part of it is that this unfair claim is being placed in the hands of manufacturers and big advertising concerns throughout the entire United States. Many people in those distant cities, not familiar with the situation, will naturally be led to believe that Paris is really a Dallas suburban area. The damage it will do to the Paris Morning News to be sure, will be great, but it does not stop at that. It minimizes one of our city's chief assets. Any people and much capital have been drawn to Paris because it is the largest city between Dallas and Fort Smith, Kansas; because the nearest city of similar size to the east is only one hundred miles away and the largest of similar size to the west is sixty-five miles.

But hereafter Parisians, when you go away from home and people ask where you live just tell them "in the Dallas suburban area" and everybody will understand. And if you want to be real generous about it you can give the Dallas Morning News credit for this most recent accomplishment.

Forward with Paris, the great "suburban area" of Dallas.

INDICATION SEEN KIDNAP PROBES TO BACK-TRACK

Will Search For Clues That May Have Been Over- looked By Police

TROOPERS RECHECK SOUTHLAND COUNTRY

Still Pursuing Investigation Into Disappearance of German Servants

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 17. (AP)—An indication that those working on the Lindbergh kidnaping case are going back over their investigating of the last 16 days in a search for clues they may have missed came from the famous flier's home Thursday.

Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of state police, was asked if cigarette butts had been found in the nursery from which the 20-months old child was stolen.

"A careful check on everything in the nursery was made as soon as police arrived," he replied. "This has been rechecked several times to make sure nothing was missing. No cigarette butts were found."

State troopers also have been rechecking the Southland country, side through which they searched the week of the abduction. The rest of Colonel Schwarzkopf's bulletins consisted of reports on the usual daily grist of rumors, tips and leads that so far have always landed his men in blind alleys.

As far as is known from his statements, the only old angle of the investigation that has not been dropped is the checking of a story about two German servants who disappeared from their employer's home in Franklin Park, N. J., about 30 miles from here, the day after the kidnaping.

16 MEN PLACED IN VARIOUS JOBS HERE THURSDAY

Nine Given Work at Legion Airport; Others Placed In City

Sixteen local men were given employment Thursday through the Legion employment office, nine being sent to the American Legion Airport and seven securing jobs in the city. J. W. (Bill) Harris, in charge of the employment office, said Thursday night. Mr. Harris also said ten men will be used at the airport Friday.

The work at the airport however, can be carried on only a limited time, according to members of the unemployment relief committee, unless the group chairman in charge of canvassing the homes of city, make their reports. It was said Thursday less than half the group chairman have reported. This, committee members said, is holding back the work of the employment office. No considerable amount of public or civic work can be done unless the active cooperation of all the citizens is secured.

Only two additional registrations were received Thursday at the employment office.

Here are Rules Slogan Contest

Here are the rules for the slogan-writing contest to be featured during Paris' Spring Fashion week, March 18-25. The windows displaying the letters to be used, painted in red on large white cards, will be unveiled at 7 p. m. Friday.

All entries must reach the Chamber of Commerce offices by Monday, March 21.

Slogans may contain from one to ten words—not more than ten.

Each slogan must be accompanied by a list of the business houses at which was displayed each letter used in writing the slogan. No entries will be considered unless this list, with the letter shown at each place, accompanies the slogan.

Slogans should be appropriate to Spring Fashion Week, suggesting Paris as the Fashion Center of Northeast Texas.

Spring Fashion Revue, Window Panorama Opens Tonight At 7

Seven o'clock Friday evening marks the opening hour of Paris' Spring Fashion Revue and Window Panorama, officially designating Paris as the Fashion Center of Northeast Texas.

The festival, to continue through Friday, March 25, is sponsored by the Retailers' division of the Lamar county chamber of commerce, of which Herman C. Coker is the chairman. Henry P. Mayer is chairman of the arrangements for style week.

Flashing on special lights to illuminate the plaza, unveiling of specially decorated windows, displaying also the letters to be used in writing the style week slogan, and a parade including numerous cars and organizations are all set for 7 o'clock promptly. About 5 o'clock, a free street dance will be held on the plaza, to enhance the carnival spirit of the occasion. During the parade about $500 free gifts will be distributed. Small boxes containing tags entitling the finder to a specified gift donated by some Paris merchant to be tossed from the cars during the parade.

The Paris municipal band will lead off the parade, and about 15 or 20 huge carnival masks of papier mache, representing various comic characters will be worn by marchers, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Khalid Grotto patrol and the fire department will be represented followed by thirty cars bearing signs of various mercantile houses of Paris.

The parade will form Friday ev.

In more than 60 decorated windows of Paris, will be displayed large red letters painted on white cards, these to be used in writing slogans in the style week contest, for which cash prizes are offered.

Much secrecy surrounds the special decorations of the merchants to their windows, and these will not be disclosed before 7 o'clock Friday evening. Cash prizes of $12.50, $7.50 and $5 are offered as first, second and third prizes for the most original window decorations.

About 75 Paris citizens will wear white ribbon badges designating them as members of the official reception committee for the evening.

During the coming week, merchants will redeem the gift bags tossed from the cars during the parade and as well the tags attached to about 600 gas-filled toy balloons which were let loose, 100 each day, during this week. Many of these carried to a considerable

OPPOSITION IS VOICED IN HOUSE BY BOTH PARTIES

Advocates Reply With Earnest Wind-Up of General Argument

REPUBLICANS WILL CALL CONFERENCE

Rainey, Illinois, Threatens Dire Results If Budget Not Balanced

WASHINGTON, March 17. (AP)—Rebellion against the manufacturers sales tax flamed high in both parties in the house Thursday, but its bipartisan advocates replied by earnest—almost impassioned—wind-up of general argument for it in the debate.

G. O. P. Leaders Capitalize. Republican leaders capitalized to the demands of persistent opponents of the tax in their ranks to call a party conference Friday night to discuss the highly controversial section of the revenue bill designed to balance the 1933 budget.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, the Democratic leader, told the house the sales tax part of the $1,095,000,000 bill was the only fair way of raising the money to balance the budget and gravely warned it was necessary.

"If we don't balance this budget we are going to have the biggest panic any nation ever had in the history of the world," Rainey said.

"Senate Will Defeat It." Meanwhile, Rep. Doughton, Democrat of North Carolina, leader of the Democratic group which organized to bolt their leaders on the issue, said:

"If we don't defeat the sales tax here the senate will do it."

Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York, obtained 39 names to a petition and forced Representative Snell of New York, minority leader, to call a party conference for Friday night. The independents opposing the sales levy hope to break into the regular lines at the meeting.

Asserting the government was running behind its receipts $7,882,000 a day, Rainey told the house "we now have added to the public debt $5,000,000,000 and we will pay an annual interest charge on that of $210,000,000."

Arguments Begun

HOUSTON, Texas, March 17. (AP)—The arguments of counsel were begun late Thursday in Barney McInerney's trial for the gang murder of John Cherris and will be concluded Friday.

LOANS ASKED BY LAMAR FARMERS FROM $25 - $235

107 Applications Received To Date By Local Loan Office

Application for farm crop production loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation by Lamar county farmers have averaged $25 to $235 according to information from the local office on Thursday. The average loan was estimated to be about $80.

Total 107. The total number of applications sent to the county loan committee to Thursday evening was 107, only ten being completed Thursday. There has not been such a large number of applicants during the last two days as for the first of the week.

Present indications are the total number of applications made this year will equal the number of loans made by the Federal government in Lamar county last year. The total last year reached 258.

Must Reduce Acreage

It is being pointed out by those in charge of the local office that to be eligible for securing loans this year, the total acreage farmed must not exceed the average of the last two years and that the acreage planted to cotton last year must be reduced 35 per cent this year, unless this per cent of reduction makes the cotton acreage less than 10 acres. Farmers plan to apply for loans are urged to call at the chamber of commerce building for information in regard to those who are eligible and as to the necessary waivers which must be secured before the applications can be completed.

Ends Life

TEXARKANA, March 17. (AP)—Jobless and despondent, Jack Goolsby, 45, ended his life in the family garage here Thursday by shooting himself in the head. His wife was preparing a meager meal for their two small children. A coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

Train Derailed

PRINCETON JUNCTION, N. J., March 17. (AP)—Eight cars of the west-bound "Red Arrow" New York Detroit limited of the Pennsylvania railroad, were derailed late Thursday as the train sped through this town. Only five persons were injured, all slightly.

Will Rogers says:

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., March 17.—Yesterday I finished my little poem. "The wets have a hand full of drinks, and the dries think they have a hand full of votes." Well, I meant to put, but I forgot it, the words "or visa versa." But I don't want to get mixed up in that argument.

No person has ever convinced another on prohibition. People's minds are changed through observation, and not through argument.

John Hays Hammond, the great mining engineer, who through somebody's oversight never became president, was out to see me today. He had the author of that great book "Scouting On Two Continents." We talked of South Africa where we had all prowled about at one time or another.

Headquarters Of Hitler's National Socialist Party Are Raided To Smash Plot

BERLIN, March 17. (AP)—Headquarters of Adolf Hitler's national socialist party throughout Prussia, were raided Thursday by police acting on orders to smash what Prussian officials declared was a plot to plunge Germany into civil war and seize power by force of arms.

In addition to visiting the offices of the party the police searched the homes of many Nazi leaders. They confiscated numerous files of correspondence and membership lists.

Prussian officials declared they had established that 500,000 Hitler

"storm troops," including automobile and motorcycle detachments had been made ready for mobilization at various points throughout the state.

A code message—"Grandmother dead"—was to be broadcast throughout Prussia, these officials said, and it was to be the signal for each unit to march upon the nearest large city.

German political police and espionage investigators, it was learned, recently uncovered stores of arms and ammunition declared by them to be the property of the Hitler followers.

Purported Confession Of Young Apache Buck Read At His Trial For Murder

GLOBE, Ariz., March 17. (AP)—The purported confession of Mac (Gokey) Seymour, read to the jury trying him for murder, quoted him as saying he knocked Henrietta Schmeier down with a rock, then stabbed her and left her while she was still breathing.

The fight with the Columbia University co-ed, took place in a ravine on the White river reservation where the body was found last July, according to a statement. The Indian said he had had intimate relations with the girl.

Seymour was quoted as having said the girl threw rocks at him and hit him in the chest before he struck her, and then attempted to attack him with a knife.

He stabbed her in the neck, as she lay on the ground, with the knife which he took from her hand, but she "got up, walked a little way down the canyon, and then lay down."

"I went and stood on the bank above, and cried and felt very bad," the statement continued. "I went down and looked at her and she was still breathing."

Doughtery, in his opening statement, promised to prove his client was a man crushed by remorse.

THREE MEN HELD AFTER GUN FIGHT IN BRECKENRIDGE

Police Chief of Breckenridge Tells Story of Officer's Fatal Shooting

Three men believed to have been involved in the slaying of Deputy Constable Ollie Parks, in a gun-fight at a dance morning were in custody Thursday night, the News was told by Chief of Police J. W. Kelley of Breckenridge, who arrived in Paris Thursday evening with the body of Parks.

A murder charge was filed against Harry Roberts, 30, of Throckmorton, who was shot in the leg by Parks after the officer was shot down and who is under guard in a Breckenridge hospital.

Chief Kelley said the fight started when Parks, who had gone to the dance hall on official business, attempted to disarm a man who was purported to have dropped a gun on the dance hall floor. Chief Kelley said Roberts was standing behind the man and when Parks started to disarm the other, began shooting.

After being struck by a bullet in the abdomen and another in the left arm Parks, shot from the floor, broke Roberts' leg with a shot from his revolver. Roberts' next shot struck Parks in the forehead, and another in the left shoulder.

The shooting occurred at the head of a stairway and Roberts, starting down, fell to the bottom of the steps. Jack Ellington, a Breckenridge policeman and a nephew of Parks, seized the smoking weapon and took Roberts to a hospital, before he learned of his uncle's death.

The other men arrested in connection with the affair, were arrested later in the day, one near

WAY TO REDUCE COST OF LIVING TOLD BY EXPERT

Family of Five Can Be Fed For $63 A Year, Is Claimed

The average farm family of five can be fed for one year at a total cost of $63.05 for supplies from the grocery store and yet live better than the average city family by following a plan of food production outlined by Miss Lola Blair, food specialist of the extension service of A. and M. College, at a joint meeting of W. H. D. clubs at Howland Thursday afternoon. The meeting was attended by women from Roxton, Heaton and Howland clubs. In addition five Fannin county women, including Miss Minnie Eldridge, the home demonstration agent, were present.

Follows Conference

The meeting Thursday afternoon followed a conference here on Thursday morning when Miss Blair discussed plans for this year's work with Miss Lida Cooper, Lamar county home demonstration agent, and Miss Eldridge.

Forty-five were present at the Howland meeting, when Miss Blair discussed the plan outlined by the Extension Service for producing food for the family on the farm.

What Can Be Produced. Among the family supplies which can be produced at home is included milk, potatoes, corn, fresh and canned vegetables, leafy and others, fruit, beef, pork, and mutton, fresh canned and cured, poultry, fresh and canned, cheese, nuts, eggs, flour, corn meal, ground wheat instead of oatmeal, salt pork, lard, butter, molasses, preserves, jams and jellies.

C. C. PURE BRED EGG EXCHANGE CLOSES SATURDAY

Shortage of Pure Bred Eggs Given As Reason By Hayes

The Lamar county egg exchange which has been conducted by the poultry division of that organization for the last three years will be closed Saturday, March 19, according to Dr. O. E. Hayes, chairman of the poultry division.

Dr. Hayes said the difficulty of securing pure-bred eggs to supply the demand has caused the exchange to be discontinued. Only 24 flocks were certified to furnish eggs for the exchange this year and the demand has become too great for them to supply.

The egg exchange which was instituted in 1930 has allowed a large number of Lamar county farmers to secure high grade flocks at a nominal cost, according to local poultrymen. However, it is thought there is now a sufficient number of pure-bred flocks in the county to make it comparatively easy for those who wish to improve their flocks to do so with little expense.

Local produce dealers have said the quality of Lamar county poultry has been increased almost 100 per cent within the last two years. They attribute the most of this improvement to the operation of the chamber of commerce egg exchange.

Accredited High Schools Of County Are To Offer Uniform Entrance Exams

At a meeting held here Wednesday night, the superintendents of Lamar county accredited high schools decided to give uniform entrance examinations. It was also decided to give the tests twice each year, once near the close of the term and again at the beginning of the next term.

A recent requirement of the state department of education is that written examinations must be given to pupils entering accredited high schools which offer more than two years of high school work. Superintendents from Deport, Roxton and Blossom meeting with the superintendent and principal of Paris high school on Wednesday night decided to give tests prepared by a committee representing each of these schools.

Although only those pupils from unaccredited high schools offering more than two years work will be required to take the examinations, they will be offered to all high school students in the county desiring them.

The purpose of giving the tests twice each year is to give students planning to enter accredited high schools an opportunity to take the tests while still in school and to take another examination at the beginning of the next term if they fail in the first.

Paris has been designated for the next meeting of Highway Five Association, sponsor of the move to obtain a trans-state highway from Texarkana through Paris to Texline, according to information received Thursday by the Highway division of the chamber of commerce.

Decision to hold the next meeting at Paris followed a recent meeting of the association at Gainesville when the members voted to continue the outlined program and re-elected officers.

Juan Humberto To Meet Walter Stratton Here Tuesday

BURESH-COLLET IN SEMI-FINAL OF WEEKLY CARD

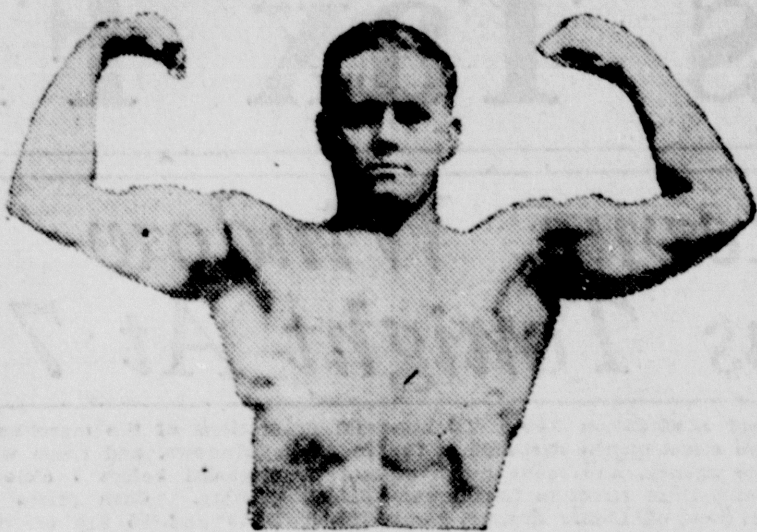

Buresh, Newcomer, Holds
Light Heavyweight Belt
Of Australia

Juan Humberto, popular Mexican grappler who has tasted defeat in a Paris ring only at the hands of Hugh Nichols, ruler of the light-heavyweight ranks, returns to local wars at the Paris Athletic Club Tuesday night. He will meet Walter Stratton, "Chicago Strong Boy" and recognized as the strongest light-heavyweight in the game today in the main bout of Promoter Doc Gilman's weekly card. The match will be two out of three falls, no time limit.

Supporting the Humberto-Stratton match will be a 45 minute time limit match involving Stanley Buresh and Jean Collet. Buresh, light-heavyweight champion of Australia, is undefeated in more than 150 matches during the last four years. He will be meeting a doughty foe in Collet, one of Paris mat fans' favorites.

Stratton, who went to a draw with Higami, Jap jiu jitsu expert here Tuesday night, is one of the most formidable contenders for Hugh Nichols' crown in the elimination tournament being unreeled in Dallas. When told he would meet Humberto, the Chicago grappler was highly pleased. "That's the man I've been wanting to meet," he told Promoter Gilman. While Buresh is a newcomer to Paris, he is a proven grappler, according to Gilman. The promoter says he has "had his fill" of unproven tin ears (he was referring to the "Terrible Turk" who proved such a flop some months ago) and would never again be guilty of matching a grappler for Paris fans unless he knew his ability. Buresh is at present a challenger for the light-heavyweight crown. His record speaks for itself. Few grapplers can go to the mat with 150 opponents and escape defeat in each encounter.

The boxing preliminary will feature Battling Baker, welterweight champion of Lamar county, who has knocked out his last two opponents in less than one minute of actual fighting, and Gerald Ray, who outpointed Willy Warren in a three-round bout Tuesday night. Both are sluggers and a lively battle looms.

Gilman said Thursday night he was looking around for a pair of middleweight wrestlers to round out his card. He also hinted he might add another boxing match to the evening's entertainment, which will be offered at the same price scale of a week ago, 50c, 75c and $1.

Laugh Maker

Ahhh. If it isn't Joe E. Brown, the big smile and howl man, himself, as he appears in "Local Boy Makes Good," the first National comedy opening a two day engagement at the Lamar theater with an Owl Show Saturday night at 11 o'clock and continuing through Monday. It's one of the laugh hits of the season.

Tim McCoy, hero of Western drama, can be seen tonight at the Lamar as an added attraction with the last showing of "Danger Lights," in a colorful role in "The Fighting Fool." All patrons attending the Lamar at 8:30 or later will be privileged to remain with our extra charge.

It is a vivid drama of adventure and romance during the early days of the old West. Sensational feats of horsemanship and a stirring plot combine to make the new McCoy picture one of his best efforts. The star is seen as a forceful young sheriff who has to battle with a dangerous gang of cattle rustlers. Beautiful Marceline Day plays opposite McCoy, and Columbia cast an outstanding group of well known screen players in "The Fighting Fool." Robert Ellis, Arthur Rankin, William V. Mong, Dorothy Granger, Ethel Wales and Harry Todd have other leading roles. Lambert Hillier, directed.

Red Sox Rained On
SAVANNAH, Ga., March 17. (AP)—The Boston Red Sox squad Thursday managed to get in an hour's batting practice before a shower sent Manager "Shano" Collins and his athletes scurrying for the clubhouse. The rain ruined Collins' plans for a long practice game.

Macks Defeat Robins
CLEARWATER, Fla., March 17. (AP)—Three home runs, two by Ed Coleman and one by Max Bishop, accounted for eight of the Athletics runs as the American league champions, defeated Brooklyn 9 to 7 Thursday. Coleman, Pacific coast rookie, connected with his homer off Bill Clark while Bishop hit his circuit drive off Waite Hoyt. Hack Wilson found the range for his second home run of the spring season in the fifth. Mahaffey was doing the pitching for the A's. Hack also poked a double and a single.

Eight Districts Must Get Supplies

Although less than two weeks remain in which the scholastic census can be made, trustees of eight districts have failed to call for census supplies. Mrs. Mary Jones Lindsay, county superintendent, said Thursday. The scholastic census must be made during the month of March and the amount of money received by the various districts from the state school fund depends upon the number of scholars reported. It is important that all children of school age be enumerated and Mrs. Lindsay is eager that the work be finished on time. Each census trustee should make a call on each district. Mrs. Lindsay said, and be certain that no child has been overlooked.

Whitlock had a half-gallon jar of whiskey in his hands when the officers entered the house armed with a search warrant, according to the report of Constable Blard. An additional two half-gallon jars of whiskey was confiscated at the house although Whitlock was the only inmate arrested, the Constable said.

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colds? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

PARISIANS WORE GREEN

SURE, it's a fine thing the day of hanging men and women for the wearing of the green is past. Were it not the population of Paris would have been considerably less Thursday night.

Although there is no general observance of St. Patrick's Day locally, there are numerous Paris citizens who are Irish enough to persist in wearing green March 17, regardless of the consequence.

Although down-trodden and abused for ages by foreigners, the "Fighting Irish" are represented in practically all parts of the civilized world. Since the beginning of history, there have been few fights of any consequence which did not have at least one participant who was proud of his Irish ancestry. Probably no race on the face of the earth is so proud of its origin or so willing to fight to uphold its convictions.

Because of their inherent fighting spirit, the Irish have had a large part in developing new countries, and in building new governments the world over. So long as there is need for fighting, just that long will there be need for Irishmen even though some of them may be Americans.

The outstanding characteristics of the Irish are their love for a fight, their native humor, their intense reverence for "Ould Erin", their inherent spirit of adventure and their willingness to help the cause of others.

WE STIFLE A YAWN

SLATED for the "What-of-it?" corner of the editorial waste basket is a bristly looking sheet of tabulated figures from that serious minded collector of straw votes, the Literary Digest.

Adopting an air of grave importance (if the admitted expenditure of half a million dollars is an indication) the Literary Digest is asking American voters what they think about the Eighteenth Amendment.

The resultant answers would leave us puzzled if they did not leave us bored.

Reminding the world at large that it conducted a similar prohibition poll early in 1930, the Literary Digest sends out return sheets indicating an overwhelming straw vote in favor of repealing the Eighteenth Amendment. The 1930 poll showed similar sentiment for either repeal or modification.

Between yawns, we engage in a little desultory pondering and come up with a couple of questions: If the voters are so preponderantly wet, how did they happen to elect a Congress so preponderantly dry, as indicated by the test of strength which took place in the House of Representatives the other day?

The 1930 Literary Digest poll indicated a decided majority in favor of modification or repeal of the Prohibition Amendment. In November, 1930, the American voters went to the polls and elected those members of the House of Representatives who voted down a wet test this week.

Does that mean that the wets are voting for dry candidates? Or does it mean that the people who find the time (and a pencil) and fill out the Literary Digest's straw ballots are not the same people who fill out the ballots that count in elections?

As a matter of fact, the Literary Digest poll seems to be just another little bit of insanity and as such should not cause much worry of a flurry than all the other little bits of insanity that abound today.

It seems reasonable to suppose that any straw vote scheme would return an indication of wet strength. The wets are out and are anxious to make as big a showing as possible. Of course, they vote—and try to persuade their friends and neighbors to vote also. The dries are in and naturally are not particularly concerned with straw votes that don't matter anyway.

The result is a lopsided picture that doesn't tell any more than would a canvass of the Hottentots.

The Literary Digest, like all other publications, is concerned with circulation figures. The publicity this poll will bring will be helpful.

And of course, this is publicity, too.

Some farmers in the city thought the ground would be dry enough for plowing next day, but others said it would be several days.

J. W. H. Redmond, 83, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Sadie Collins near Chicota. He was a Confederate veteran from Alabama.

Of the money stolen from Mrs. Odum's house Saturday night, $350 was returned in an envelope through the mails, with a note stating the sender had retained $85 which was in small bills.

The Texas Midland passenger train southbound, leaving Paris in the afternoon, was derailed six miles from the city but no one was injured.

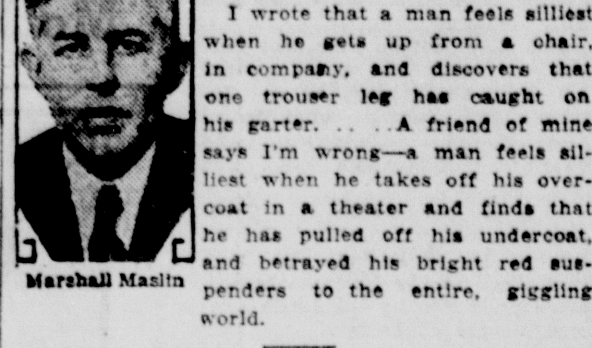

A negro man living in the north part of town created considerable interest on the street by asserting he was 125 years old and had been a boy, head associate of President Lincoln.

ALL OF US

By Marshall Maslin

"IF I HAD A MILLION—"
A MAN FEELS SILLY
SHE LOOKED JUST RIGHT

I HEARD a man say, "If I had a million dollars—"
The stars stood still, the bright rays of the moon froze in their progress to the earth, an owl ceased to hoot in the cold night air, a baby stopped crying, a policeman blew his whistle, and the world waited to hear what this one man would do if he had a million dollars. Hardly anything is more interesting than that.

Marshall Maslin

I wrote that a man feels silliest when he gets up from a chair, in company, and discovers that one trouser leg has caught on his garter. . . . A friend of mine says I'm wrong—a man feels silliest when he takes off his overcoat in a theater and finds that he has pulled off his undercoat, and betrayed his bright red suspenders to the entire, giggling world.

Once I read an article by a man on Things About Women That He Didn't Like. . . . Men are funny. The thing that irritated him most, he said, was the way women walk up the aisle of a theater, and turn, when they reach the exit and look back to see how many people have been looking at them. . . . Do women do that?

One of the pleasantest passages in all literature is Robert Louis Stevenson's description of a night under the stars. It's in his "Travels With a Donkey," and it begins: "Night is a dead monotonous period under a roof, but in the open it passes lightly, with its stars and its dew and its perfumes."

In the morning, after that fair adventure, Stevenson scattered small coins along the trail in gratitude for his memorable lodging. Reminding us that the great majority of us try, as best we can, to pay for the pleasure we get from life.

I saw a young woman who Looked Just Right. She wore a smile, a little green hat, a light brown fur coat, a green dress of the color of the hat.

She walked with a spring, you knew she was happy, and the color scheme of her outfit reminded me of the tall green-and-tan thistles you sometimes see in vacant lots down by the railroad track.

She Looked Just Right and she knew she did. That must be happiness.

Backward Glances

By A. W. Neville

FOLKS who want medicinal water for what ails them need not go away from home, for there's just as much and just as good right here as they may need. On James Ford's place just outside the corporate line on the north highway, is a well, the contents of which are heavily medicated and that fifty and more years ago was known to have medicinal properties and which was drunk regularly by people who believed in that kind of physic.

When I came to Paris it was known as Bloys' well, and had a wide local reputation for efficacy. Summer afternoons young folks used to take a walk out to Bloys' well, not so much for the water as for the companionship and association of the jaunt. It was then considered "out in the country," being a mile and more from the square, and the trip was a pleasant way of spending an hour or two of the afternoon. The water was free to anyone who would draw it from the well and Mr. Bloys welcomed all visitors.

Some years later, I. Bernstein, a Hebrew, acquired a piece of land about a mile east of the Bloys property, and a well he dug produced about the same kind of water. Bernstein capitalized his find by bottling the water and selling it, and his boy used to drive a small tank wagon about the city from which he retailed such quantities as people might want. Some jokers insisted that the water was not ill-tasting from nature's chemicals, and that Bernstein had "doctored" it, but this was just their fun, for the water is just as bad today as when Bernstein found it.

Why this water is found in this narrow streak is a mystery, for other wells in the neighborhood yield good every-day water, but it is a fact that the Bloys and Bernstein wells water is naturally medicated and as effective in results as those that are sold in drug stores and labeled with the names of foreign spas.

There are wells east of Paris, at Blossom, and Detroit, that are medicinal, and that have been used successfully by people suffering from the complaints that mineral water is used for, yet folks go away from home or send away for similar waters just as some do for clothes and other merchandise, because a prophet is without honor in his own country. Time was when Dalby Springs, down in Bowie county, was a watering place that drew people for hundreds of miles, but from lack of advertising it was allowed to lag behind other places further away but better publicized. Mineral Wells, fifty years ago, was no better known, but persistent advertising has brought it to the knowledge and patronage of people all over the United States.

My boyhood trips to Bloys' well will always remain in my memory as one of the pleasures of that early and more leisurely age, when simple pleasures satisfied what now demands a "thrill."

MY NEW YORK

By James Aswell

NEW YORK—Marginalia of a Madhattanite:
The applause on opening nights at the final curtains of plays which are indubitable flops is one of the saddest noises to be encountered along the Rialto. . . . It is always louder and more sustained than anyone expects it to be, and down front spectators often are sure they can detect the bright flush of acute embarrassment through layers of makeup. . . . I can imagine no more harrowing experience than the reception of clearly insincere plaudits. . . . Although neither author, producer nor actors may have suspected the filminess of their vehicle until the opening—such is the myopia of theatricists—they always know they have a large slice of cold turkey on their hands long before the last critic has slunk up the aisle to click damnation off on his typewriter.

Chronicles of Manhattan neglect a fertile source of material if they fail to give ear to the garrulity of taxi drivers. . . . And most taxi drivers are garrulous. . . . A few of them have written books about their experiences cruising the town, but as a rule they are as uninterested about the drama and comedy going on a few feet behind them as sailors are over the majesty of the Taj Mahal, or newspaper men over the glamor of night court. . . .

JOVIAL CALUMNY
Hackers are famed as masters of quick and stinging epithet as they maneuver for preference in the lane of traffic. . . . The other day my driver, pressed to the curb by a right-turning colleague, let out such a burst of inspired profanity that I groped for a pencil to make a note of his original combinations and pyramided reflections upon the other driver's ancestry, habits and posthumous fate—for use, perhaps, in the compilation of a lexicon for scholars.

Both cabs were halted at that moment by heavy traffic ahead. . . . Our antagonist had opportunity to reply, which he used to the full, with elaborations. . . . By this time the two cars were at a full stop, a few inches apart. . . . There was a silence. . . .

At length my driver turned his head and looked speculatively at his late foe for an instant. . . . Then he said, quite genially: "Doing much today?" . . . At once they began to talk shop, as if nothing had happened to mar a long friendship. . . .

FIRE-FIGHTING FILM
Motion picture cameras, I am told, now are standard equipment of Paris fire trucks. . . . A movie record of the technique used in dousing the blaze and its success enables chiefs to pick flaws in the attack and devise remedies.

Vanilla perfume is made from one of the worst-smelling chemicals in the world—asafoetida. . . . And many of the scents dabbed on fashionable gowns can be traced back to compounds unfragrant enough in the pure state to clear a room. . . .

The highest-paid professional pilots are employed to steer the big transatlantic liners to North river piers, yet the East river, all the way up the Sound, is one of the most hazardous waterways roundabout, particularly in a fog. My bedroom overlooks that stream near Welfare Island, and on days of low visibility the horns howl like a rehearsed off-stage chorus.

And speaking of Welfare Island, where the city prisoners languish. . . . Conversation with the renting agent for one of the most luxurious and expensive apartment buildings on the East Side brought out an odd commentary on the preferences of Manhattanites. . . . The more costly suites in the house have a view on the river, and incidentally of the penal colony. . . . Millionaires in their breakfast sunrooms look down on the morning exercises of the prisoners.

"Don't they object to that view?" I wanted to know. . . . "Not at all," my informant insisted, "that is, not the ones with clear consciences, anyway." . . . "They feel just the opposite about it," he went on. . . . "They can glance at those unlucky guys and feel fortunate, no matter how hard the market has hit them!" . . .

WASHINGTON—While funny, the interest of regular Republicanism in political purity this year is not particularly puzzling. . . . The probing of irregularities in the last two or three campaigns has not resulted at all to the advantage of the G.O.P. Old Guard. Orthodox Hamiltonians did not want these inquiries but had to acquiesce in them to avoid being accused of reluctance to have their candidates' methods looked into.

In the present instance, however, the demand for an investigation comes from a regular of regulars—Senator Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa. . . . In 1925 it was the democrats, it will be recalled, who launched an inquiry into expenditures by aspirants for senatorial nominations. . . .

James A. Reed of Missouri, then a senator, was made chairman of the investigating committee. It was not a presidential year. Fights for senate seats alone were available for Reed to concentrate on, for the representatives, of course, do their own investigating. He did not concern himself with elections, either; the committee on privileges and elections settles controversies of that sort. Reed devoted himself exclusively to nomination contests. . . . To be sure, there were constitutional authorities aplenty who argued that nominations also were none of his business; that if the primaries were satisfactory to the state in which they were held, that was all there was to it. . . . Nevertheless, Reed insisted on making nominations his business. As history records, he did it to such good effect that two republicans—William S. Vare of Pennsylvania and Frank L. Smith of Illinois—were denied the right to take their senate seats, on Reed's showing that their respective nominations cost too much money, despite their presentation of certificates of actual election. . . . In some respects the similar

Diet and Health

By Logan Clendening, M. D., Author of "The Human Body"

"Does goiter ever get well without a surgical operation?" This, of course, depends upon the type of goiter. The simple forms of goiter, in the great majority of cases, get perfectly well without a treatment whatever. Sometimes, however, they turn into another form, but this is relatively rare.

The large, hard, nodular goiters do not respond to any kind of medical treatment. The use of iodine, whether taken internally or rubbed on the neck, has no value in this treatment, although this treatment is often prescribed, especially by irresponsible practitioners.

This leaves us with the form of goiter which produces symptoms of nervousness, staring eyes, and rapid heart action—called "exophthalmic goiter," and sometimes called "Graves disease" after the Irish physician who was one of its first describers.

We have plenty of evidence that a goiter of this type runs a definite course of about four years and eventually the patient gets well without the necessity of a surgical operation. For instance, among the earliest reports of this disease is that of a German physician named Basedow. He wrote his descriptions of these cases before the days when surgery was perfected and before anyone had ever removed a thyroid gland by surgical operation.

Reading those reports with this in mind it is interesting to note that while Dr. Basedow did not understand the nature of the disease and he constantly reported that he thought his patients were going to die, in every one of his case reports he notes that in the course of time the enlargement of the thyroid gland went down and all the symptoms of nervousness and heart trouble ceased.

Such histories show that it is possible with this particular condition for complete recovery to take place. It is, of course, admitted that in most instances the removal of the thyroid by surgery hastens the recovery.

TALKS WITH PARENTS

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

Each year about 50,000 children are born out of wedlock in the United States. Many of these children are at first cared for by charitable institutions. Many of them are adopted into good homes immediately after birth. Those responsible for the public care of such children and for placing them permanently or temporarily in normal homes face a great many problems. In many instances when the unwed mother wishes to keep the child and bring it up, her mental, moral and physical fitness is first ascertained, to determine whether she promises to be capable of having the child entrusted to her care.

More often than not the unwed mother not only does not wish to care for the child, but prefers to have her identity in relation to the child concealed from it and from the public. Although the great majority of children available for adoption are those with unwed mothers, there are many other sources of children for adoption familiar to the reader.

Many married couples denied the privilege of parenthood have desired to adopt a child or two. I know a remarkable pair who have adopted five children, having adopted a new child about every 18 months, until this number was arrived at.

Although the motive for adopting a child is usually a very worthy and admirable one, occasionally it is selfish; sometimes it operates without much thought, planning or readiness of the adopting parents to appreciate child development or to understand child nature. The interest may be centered on the baby as if he were always to remain a baby.

In case you are about to be a foster parent, you will first want to have some questions answered about the child by competent experts. What is the child's intelligence? Is it superior, normal, dull, inferior, feeble-minded? What is the child's physical promise? Is he now physically sound? What was the mental and physical status of his parents, grandparents, uncles and aunts.

Every now and then someone writes to me wanting to know where he can get a baby for adoption. My answer is that they are very scarce and that the best place to apply is at the nearest child-placing agency. Then an occasional prospective foster parent raises the question whether, with a limited income, it were not kinder to the child to leave him in an orphanage where he is well cared for, than to adopt him into a home which could not provide so many physical advantages.

Be it known that no orphanage, however well equipped or manned, can give the child what the normal family can give. In spite of the good care of babies in most orphanages, the death rate is much above the average for babies in families. It may not be too much to say that some babies in the orphanage die for want of mothering, die for want of love.

When a baby is adopted the foster parents are usually so conscientious about their obligations to the child that they try too hard to be good parents. Their task is not an easy one, though many prove wonderfully successful. To them my heart goes out with great admiration; and for those who try so hard and still fail, one must also have great sympathy.

PERSONAL ADVICE

By Virginia Lee

The young man who is not in a position to marry and does not desire to become serious with any girl is often in an embarrassing position. It is one of the laws of nature that propinquity breeds affection. That is, if two young people see a great deal of one another, or the other is almost sure to get past the purely platonic stage. If it is the young man whose affection overcomes him he can court the girl assiduously until she either tells him definitely that she does not care for him "that way" or makes him the "happiest man on earth."

If the girl comes to care for the youth more than mere friendship would warrant, she has no recourse except to wait, disguising her feelings as well as she can. If she isn't successful in hiding her heart the boy friend usually takes refuge in flight to spare her feelings. It's the only thing the poor boy can do under the circumstances.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: About a year and a half ago I came in contact with a fine young man and had a number of dates with him. Our dates had to be few and far between so we corresponded. For some reason he failed to write or come to see me. I wrote to him several times but no answer came so I dropped the subject. Within the past year I have seen him several times. He always speaks and at times carries on a brief conversation. I never told a man that I loved him, but I think he knows. I have tried awfully hard to hide it. "Knowing that it is useless to care for him I have tried mightily hard to forget, but he is on my mind constantly. At times I am on the verge of insanity. I don't know how much longer I can endure it. Shall I continue going with other men, trying to cover up my love for him, or shall I write and reveal my feelings?"

BLUE BROWN EYES.
Dear, the young man has told you as plainly as he can without words that he does not care for you that way, and because he saw that you were growing too fond of him he broke off the friendship. There is no use in embarrassing yourself by humiliating yourself further by telling him specifically how you feel and have suffered.

COMFORT COLICKY BABIES THROUGH CASTORIA'S LITTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, or any, is to avoid gas in the stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, from waste. But remember a tiny baby's tender little stomach can't stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. It is just the time Castoria can help. Castoria you know, is especially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds, fever. Keep genuine Castoria in your home with the name: Castoria whose credulity and childlike mind had been exploited by a woman's mental and emotional superiority—a frightened Indian who killed by accident in self-defense.

Miss Schmerler, he asserted he would show, accompanied Seymour to the dance at her own insistence, pleading the young redman with liquor to gain her point when he demurred.

"Seymour had ridden by the white woman's house," he told the jury, "when she called to him. She said, 'I see Indian men and women passing here riding the same horse. Let me ride to the dance with you.'"

"She asked him to go in her house and have a drink—he accepted, offered her a pint bottle of whiskey, offered him a drink which he took."

"Then she asked him again to take her to the dance, and he consented. She was dressed in Indian costume. He helped her on the horse in front—He got on behind. She seemed very happy—leaned back now and then to chuck him under the chin."

"At her request he turned into an old Indian trail. They dismounted."

"They got on the horse and went on—by that time he was intoxicated."

They came to the muddy wash, and decided to cross on foot. She kept teasing and tantalizing him—commenced hitting him with her bag—then caught his hands and held them."

Dougherty declared "she made no strenuous objection—but later she commenced to cry, and he got to feeling bad—feeling he had not done right by his wife. He was in a sorrowful, penitent state of mind, and told her he had done the wrong thing, and was going on alone. She insisted that she go with him, and they got in a fight."

"He got on his horse and went to Gatewood's house. He told the Gatewoods he had had a fight with the white woman and was going to report it."

"Then he went on to the dance, intending when he got there to tell his people. He was still intoxicated. His wife found him, made him a bed of hay. He slept there the rest of the night."

LADIES' NIGHT AT LIONS CLUB

Games, Jokes, Contests and Irish Music Constitute Program

Members of the Lions club, their guests and ladies, met at the Gibraltar hotel Thursday night for the Lions semi-annual ladies' night. Games, practical joking, contests and Irish music constituted the program, which was in charge of Thomas Gay.

J. C. Roberts extended an address of welcome to the visitors, in which he stressed the informality of the occasion and urged everyone to feel perfectly at home.

The dinner menu, prepared and presented under the personal supervision of manager Ray Pethybridge, of the Gibraltar hotel, was unusually attractive. A combination St. Patrick's day and Easter decorative effect was employed in the arrangement of the tables.

The first feature of the program was a word-making contest. The words "St. Patrick" were given and contestants were required to form as many words as possible from the letters in the given words.

Another feature which sent the ladies scurrying from one table to another wildly waving slips of paper and pencils was a contest among them for the purpose of obtaining a maximum number of autographs from the men present in a specified length of time. The winner of this contest was Mrs. J. Roby Ward.

Hugh Palmer, as the intended victim of a practical joke at the hands of program chairman Gay, became suspicious and turned the tables on his would-be tormentor when Mr. Gay announced that the hotel management had complained that a certain member of the Lions club was purloining the silverware and preparing "to make off with de swag." Mr. Palmer felt a suspicious bulge in his side pocket where certain articles of silverware had been put without his knowledge and after an heroic defense of himself and a scathing denunciation of his critics was granted complete vindication. This episode was hilariously greeted.

An embarrassing tie between 27 people was the result of a contest on answering 10 questions in which the word "green" was part of each answer. The prize for the contest was ultimately awarded to Palmer Hancock.

A highly varied Irish musical program was presented under the direction of Mrs. Clara Rice Thompson. Several numbers were played by a violin quartet composed of Mrs. Benton Fisher, Mrs. Jas. Sheffield, Mrs. George Shelton and Carl Moore. Mr. Moore was also presented in a flute solo.

Miss Nellie Anderson was presented in a whistling solo of Irish songs. A number of these songs were sung by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Bud Morgan, Mrs. Frank Fuller, Richard Parker and Ben Walther.

Heavy Snow Fall Half Century Ago

ROXTON, March 17.—Captain J. W. Dickey recalls that 53 years ago today, March 17, 1881, the heaviest snow he ever saw fell covered this section. Snow fell all day and the wind blew hard. His daughter Kitty, now Mrs. Roy Price of Cleburne was born that day, and Captain Dickey says that while his home on his farm east of Roxton was covered with riven board shingles he had to spread extra quilts over the bed to keep the snow off his wife and baby, because the wind blew it in through the crevices.

Drifts on the north side of the house were eight feet deep, he says, and he was unable to open the door of the kitchen for two days. At White Cut, on the Texas and Pacific railroad between Brookston and Petty, the snow drifted so deep the train stuck and the crew had to dig the snow from the track before it could go through. The cut was filled almost level by the heavy fall and drifts.

The Story of an Unemployed Girl

ETHEL DA-
SEDFORD
Author of
"BROADWAY BRIDE"

his face was pressed against her hair.

CHAPTER 9.

A radio was playing. The tune was right in that very room. It had been turned on by clicking a little switch on the wall—just as you would the electric light switch. Blane had turned it on... and it played very softly.

It was a familiar tune. A waltz. Blane held out his arms to Lillian. At first when she turned and saw him beside her with his arms open he frightened her. She had been dreaming out of the window... it was the first time she ever had seen the electric come to life in New York... seen twilight become Manhattan sunlight.

At first she backed away from him—then she realized he wanted her to dance.

Blane noticed that there was a sort of melting tenderness in her blue-black eyes.

Lillian felt a thrill run through her body like a lightning bolt when he held her in his arms and swayed to the easy rhythm.

He found her slender waist. His long arm enveloped it. They swayed together in the twilight of the room.

Lillian was a little maddened with the romantic adventure.

Here she was in the arms of the most fascinating man she ever had known. Well, she really did not know him. She only had seen him for the first time less than twenty-four hours ago.

But now she was in his arms... gliding to the loveliest tune. He held her close, tenderly. His face was pressed against her hair.

She liked the warmth of him. He was so tall, so big. He was so sophisticated. He was so suave. He was all the things that she thought a man should be. He was a man of the world.

An appealing odor, a blend of tobacco and liquor and of tweed. Always, she thought, when she thought of tobacco, liquor and tweed she would think of Thomas Blane—perhaps long for him.

It was the first time Lillian had thought of life beyond Thomas Blane. Since she had seen him the day before he had become so much a part of her very existence.

His arm closed about her a little more. The radio played a little more. It changed from the slow dreamy waltz to a peppy tune... some screechy girl started singing. Blane took his arms from around her and said "My God."

He awayed a little when he went over to the radio switch and clicked it off.

Lillian's face burned. The thrill of the dance burned her face... made her hair a mass of soft wire which clung about her fingers as she turned to the bureau to put it in place with her trembling hands.

Her eyes were very bright. They were filled with something Lillian had not seen in their blue-black depths before.

Maybe this was the spirit of New York. No, she thought, this is a little taste of real life... and a taste she never would have known had she stayed home.

Blane was there by her side. He was looking down at her, as if he wanted to take her into his arms. Lillian watched him in the mirror. He turned and met her eyes in the mirror.

He was looking at her with a flicker in his eyes. Lillian turned to the window again.

"Blane—let's go out—I want to walk along Broadway. I've never been on Broadway at night."

He followed her to the window. He caught her hand. He said:

"Tell me something—have you ever had a sweetheart?"

Lillian was surprised. "Why,

Blane—after what I told you on the train... I told you I didn't." "Oh—I know, I mean, I mean—have you ever been in love?" "In love? Why—no, I don't think I really have—ever." He crushed her hand. He lifted it to his lips, and he turned the palm to his mouth.

She wanted to touch his hair, as his head bent over her hand. It seemed an obvious gesture, perhaps a little too sentimental. She had seen it done in plays, in the movies. The women always touched the hair of the men who kissed their hands.

That was one thing she must not be with Blane—sentimental. She said: "Blane—you make me feel as if I were on the stage—already." He lifted his face. He was flushed and his eyes were a little heavy. There was that queer flicker in his eyes again—it was a sort of mocking amusement.

"Are you making fun of me?" he asked.

"Oh, Blane—" "Why are you laughing?" "I'm not—laughing."

"You are—listen to you!" He dropped her hand.

She pushed back against the facing of the window.

"Oh, I didn't mean to be laughing—at you. I—I meant to tell you that when you did that—you know, when you kissed my hand I felt as if I might be—be, Norma Talmadge, sure enough..."

She tried to be light, she smiled, but he didn't.

It seemed that her manner affected him unpleasantly. She was so awed by him she did not know just what to do or say just then.

"Look here, Lillian," he said. "This—you and I—do you care... do you feel you could care—for me?"

She could not believe her ears. Could it be, that so suddenly he thought he cared for her... After all, it hadn't been just one-sided.

this peculiar feeling she had about him... had ever since he sat there by the fire in her house and talked... and looked at her so... had said he had plans for her... plans for her happiness...

All the time he had intended plans for their happiness... their happiness together... It was almost too much for Lillian to comprehend. It was too much like a dream...

"Oh, Blane—" she gasped his name.

"Don't you know—can't you understand what I feel for you..." Lillian couldn't speak.

He was coming nearer. She knew he was holding out his arms to her, even though she couldn't look at him, somehow.

It was all so sudden. Why, she didn't know him. He didn't know her. Really, but it seemed that always they had known, always she had known that he would come to her, come and declare his love for her...

"Blane...you mean...you love me..."

She said that. Why should she ask him whether he loved her? That wasn't the thing she believed a girl would do, when she faced the man...

"Aren't you going to kiss me?" he demanded.

Lillian did not answer. She was suddenly afraid. She didn't know why.

"Blane—I—" He reached for her. But she stepped out of his way. Somehow her hand found the light switch.

In the bright light Lillian saw, to her astonishment, that there was none of the sweetness in his eyes which she confidently had expected to see.

14 ONE acre residence lots if you erect a house. Also the best business lot in town if you build a brick store on same. Musgrove & Co. will rent your store. They are in a poor house now and need a better one. I think this will be the best town in Lamar county (save Paris) in 20 years. If you have a residence or a brick store in some town with no future move them here and get the land free. Draw rent instead of a shut door. All we need is a road out and they are coming from 3 ways. Too far away from a court house to get smothered as other towns are doing. S. A. Cunningham, Cunningham, Texas.

Markets

Dallas Produce.
DALLAS, March 17, (P)—Poultry and eggs: hens, lb. 10 to 12; young chickens, lb. 10 to 13; turkeys, lb. 6 to 12; guineas, doz. 2.40 to 2.60; geese, lb. 6 to 7; eggs, doz. 8 to 10; packing butter, lb. 7 to 8; ducks, lb. 8 to 10. Paris prices corresponding.

New Orleans Cotton.
NEW ORLEANS, March 17, (P)—While trading in cotton was by no means active Thursday, prices were rather steady and advanced in sympathy with the upswing in stocks following some erratic fluctuations during the morning. After gaining 4 to 5 points in the first hour owing to the lowering of the Bank of England rates of 4 1/2 per cent off 5 to 6 points with weakness in stocks. In the afternoon prices recovered with an advance in the stock market and gained 8 to 9 points from the lows, making new highs for the day at the end and closing steady showing net advances for the day of 6 to 8 points.

The market opened steady in sympathy with cables. Although no great activity developed in the late trading prices continued to advance and made new highs for the session at 6.85 for May, 7.11 for July and 7.31 for October or 3 to 9 points above the lows of the morning.

New York Cotton.
NEW YORK, March 17, (P)—A slight opening advance in cotton Thursday was followed by reactions but prices firmed up again during the afternoon on a renewal of trade buying and covering influenced by reports of continued small southern offerings and a stronger stock market.

After selling up to 5.93 early, May contracts reached 6.57, then advanced to 6.95 and closed at 6.92. The general market closed steady at net advances of 2 to 5 points.

The further reduction in the Bank of England discount rate had a favorable effect on sentiment and probably contributed to the early gains.

Offerings increased somewhat at the advance, and the market eased during the middle of the day.

New York Stocks.

NEW YORK, March 17, (P)—Rumors of good news, and the actual appearance of at least one item that could be so labeled, gave stocks an upward push Thursday and the market closed with gains which represented virtual cancellation of what had been lost yesterday.

After showing a much firmer undertone in the morning, prices were later stimulated by reports that policies to be followed in the matter of reconstruction finance corporation loans to railroads had been smoothed over. Coincidentally, the Chesapeake & Ohio released a favorable February earnings statement, and the combined effect to touch off a fair volume of short covering, especially in carrier stocks.

Wall street has had some misgivings as to how much the railroad wage cuts would help income because of the continued traffic decline.

Chicago Grain.

CHICAGO, March 17, (P)—Assessments that the farm board was trying to arrange credit and sales of 50,000,000 bushels of wheat abroad tended to unsettle grain values Thursday.

Unexpected departure for Europe by George S. Milnor, head of the grain stabilization corporation, an auxiliary of the farm board, gave a jar to traders. Heaviness of the wheat market persisted notwithstanding authoritative denials that the farm board might be forced to sell wheat, and despite positive statements that the board's wheat was amply margined and its accounts satisfactory to the banks making loans.

Closing indemnities, wheat, May 57 to 57 1/8, 58 3/8 to 1-2; July 59 to 59 1/8, 60 3/8 to 1-2; Sept. 61 1/8, 62 3/8. Corn, May 35 3/8 to 1-2, 36 3/4 to 7-8; July 40 7-8, 41 1/4.

You can't improve on Nature

Would you sweeten wild bee's home
Would you change the cherry's taste
Don't you think it would seem funny
To mix maple sap with paste?

Would the rose's scent seem sweeter
If a chemist loaned a hand?
Does the lily-bed look neater
Painted by an artist grand?

Choose your cigarette discreetly,
And by words do not be tricked...
NATURE does the work completely
When OLD GOLD tobacco's picked

PURE TOBACCO... NO ARTIFICIAL FLAVORING

That's why O. G. do not scratch the throat or taint the breath... [Cellophane-wrapped, of course]
